2006 Moric Blaufrankisch Burgenland

Rating: 91
Drink: -

The generic 2006 Blaufrankisch Burgenland unites fruit from both Neckenmarkt and Lutzmannsburg. Subtle vanilla and smoke suggestions compliment aromas of fresh dark berries. On the palate, the clear fresh berry compote character is accented by licks of salt, lead pencil and wet stone. This displays some real depth and density, yet allied to a transparency and vivacity which outside of Burgundy you will rarely encounter in red. It should be versatile and delightful for at least 4-5 years, but it is honestly too early to speak of a track record in that regard.

Roland Velich's Moric project (about which I have written extensively in issues 160 and 177) becomes more exciting by the year, and the 2007 and 2008 vintages will each mark the inception in bottle of new wines involving the re-discovery of forgotten sites and old vines, including a joint Blaufrankisch project with Hannes Schuster in Zagersdorf, whose 2007 debut was quite exciting from cask. Also beginning with the 2007 vintage, incidentally, Velich tentatively envisions a regional blend incorporating some Zweigelt as his introductory level wine.

2006 Moric Blaufrankisch Lutzmannsburg Alte Reben

Rating: 94
Drink: -

The Moric 2006 Blaufrankisch Lutzmannsburg Alte Reben offers penetrating aromas of smoky black tea, rose hip, fresh cherry and blackberry. Bitter-sweet, bright black fruits are folded into a subtly silken, creamy palate, accompanied by a vivid sense of meat reduction and saline savor. These old vines offer a stunning impression of sheer extract; terrific persistence of juicy, concentrated, blackberry, pepper, ginger; and a tactile as well as taste-able note that I can only metaphorically liken to a mixture of chalk dust and iron filings. Talk about the proverbial iron fist in the velvet glove: this strikes me as capable of being a ten year wine.

2006 Moric Blaufrankisch Neckenmarkter

Rating: 92
Drink: 2009-2014

The Moric 2006 Blaufrankisch Neckenmarkter (based largely on fruit from the Bodegraben vineyard and young vines in various parts of the Hochberg) already delivers in the nose what have come to seem Neckenmarkt-typical, pronouncedly- and sweetly-pungent Szechuan pepper and fresh black fruits. Bright and firm on the palate and with a palpable sense of extract, it reveals marrow-like, sweet, deep meatiness, hints of cocoa powder, salt, and lead pencil, leading into an insistent, subtly tart yet ripe and lip-smacking finish. As this opens in the glass over an hour's time, it becomes increasingly nuanced, reflecting the fascinating personalities that each of its geologically and micro-climatically distinct lots displayed in cask. I suspect it will become more winsome over the coming year and that it will hold well for at least 4-5 years.

2006 Moric Blaufrankisch Neckenmarkter Alte Reben

Rating: 95
Drink: -

Velich's 2006 Blaufrankisch Neckenmarkter Alte Reben delivers the predictable aromas and flavors of concentrated black fruits, along with sweetly smoky suggestions of machine oil and Szechuan pepper, as well as pungently smoky Lapsang tea. Here, the animal and mineral aspects seem to merge into a concentrate of soy, sea water, and beef stock. Rich and silken-textured, this wine's tannins are so refined as to have melted away. A deep, low-toned, multi-dimensional, rolling finish washes over the palate, leaving behind invigorating brightness of fruit, subtle fruit pit bitterness, and a shimmering diversity of mineral suggestions that one feels must somehow reflect this wine's origins in the Urgestein upper elevations of Neckenmarkt. I would tentatively plan on following this for a decade, but as to having some in your cellar to follow, that plan ought not in the least be tentative!

2006 Moric Blaufrankisch Sankt Georgener

Drink: -

The second release of red from the Leitha Hills above Eisenstadt, Velich's brightly-fruited 2006 Blaufrankisch Sankt Georgener seems to fit this diminutive vineyard's breezy, chalky hillside location. A fascinating and penetrating nose of black raspberries, cherries, pistachio, and citrus oils is delivered at almost ethereally distilled fruit intensity. Sappy, faintly oily in texture, and loaded with inner-mouth esters, this wine's bitter-sweet, subtly-tart black fruits are tinged with invigorating medicinal-herbal pungency, and joined in a tenaciously-clinging finish by notes of citrus zest, white pepper, bitter cherry pit, chalk, and iodine. There is not an ounce of fat on this athletic wine's body, and its performance is as polished and refined in structure as it is energetic and extract-rich. I suspect it will age well for 7-9 years, but must base that suspicion on intuition.

2007 Moric Gruner Veltliner Sankt Georgen

Drink: -

Velich's 2007 Gruner Veltliner Sankt Georgener is the successor to the inaugural vintage from ancient vines in the Leitha hills just north of Burgenland's capital Eisenstadt, a breezy site with mussel-chalk soils whose fruit was vinified in barrel with malo-lactic conversion and extended lees contact in order to channel what turned out to be an uncanny resemblance to Chablis. Velich once again picked in one pass from top to bottom of this site, so as to capture a range of ripeness and flavors. The wine was slated to be bottled only late last year, so my note is from barrel. Distilled cherry, and bitter-sweet floral notes fill the nose. On the palate, this is creamy in texture and seductively rich, yet possesses a purity of yellow cherries, pear, white peach, and papaya transparent to lentil, curry, chalk dust, subtly bitter fruit pits, and saline, crustacean savor that upon swallowing (or spitting, if like me, you must) leave one helplessly salivating. Trust me, word of this wine has already reached French wine growing fanatics from the Cote d'Or to the high (Grenache-Gris studded) foothills of the Pyrennes, and before long, given the size of the vineyard, you may well consider yourself lucky to score a bottle. Any of us educated into Austrian wine learned that the country's national grape produces mediocrity in Burgenland – so much for received opinion. Velich's 2006 reds challenge and ultimately surpass his 2004s as the best wines in the six year history of the Moric projec...
